Our traverse walls are built using the latest climbing hold technology. We manufacture our own polyurethane rubber-backed holds here in the UK which grip on to virtually any surface, so even if your wall is stone with no obvious flat faces, our system can be safely used.

The fixing system allows the holds to be repositioned with use of the provided tool, so the wall can evolve over time and climbing holds can be quickly and easily replaced at a low cost. The climbing holds we use include some which are actual copies of real rock features found in the Lake District.

The climbing holds come in a minimum of 4 different bright colours which are installed to create a variety of graded challenges. These climbing routes can be designed to suit any age groups from reception/infants to secondary school and beyond.

A traverse wall always proves a popular piece of play equipment and because the footholds are kept below 600mm no safety surfacing is legally required.
